Naught Escapes Us: The Story of 206 Squadron Peter B. Gunn

No. 206 Squadron began its life with the formation of the Royal Air Force in April 1918. Like many other units, it was absorbed into the fledgling RAF from its previous existence as NO. 6 Squadron RNAS, formed in December 1916. This is the story of the unit from the early days in World War 1, through roles as a fighter squadron, a transport squadron, a maritime patrol squadron and a test and evaluation squadron. A fascination story for those with a general interest in military aviation, appendices and a comprehensive index also make this a valuable work of reference for military historians.
