If you have ever had the profound delight to have found yourself in the company of a Greyhound, it does not take you long to realize that you are in the company of something very different, of something very special. The Greyhound, to put it succinctly, is something else. The Greyhound is unique. There is no other dog like the Greyhound. Why is that? The way they are raised? Their life at the track? Most everybody will tell you all dogs have evolved from the wolf. Do I hear anything for others? Fox? Hyena? Jackal? Coyote? I, for one, do not vote for the wolf: Artic, Asian, North American, European or otherwise. This magazine has three themes: (1) the nagging question of the evolution of the Greyhound, from the folks on the farms and from the trainers at the tracks, the folks who day in and day out work with these dogs, and the adoption folks who know these dogs as the retired athletes and devoted friends that they are; (2) the impact Greyhounds have made on the Iowa economy through the state's two race tracks and Iowa's Department of Agriculture; and (3) is it true that every Iowa Greyhound farm has a non-Greyhound administrator?
