Excerpt from The Journal of Nervous and Mental Disease, 1901, Vol. 28: The Official Organ of the American Neurological Association, the New York Neurological Society and the Chicago Neurological Society

As regards the lesions of the blood vessels, Bastianelli finds them less marked in the cases of the first group, where the lesions occupy relatively limited areas, and more marked in the typical, quasi-systematic, whole-column degenerations, though on the vascular-origin theory, as upheld by Marie, one might expect the reverse to be the case. In other words, he thinks that the vascular changes are secondary and keep pace with the intensity of the sclerotic process.
